Selections from the Surface team's endless list of personal obsessions.

DEVIL'S DARLING, LONDON

"Named for the mural of Napoleon's coronation that covers one of its walls, Devil's Darling deftly packs every faded hotel-bar cliché into a single room—thick tablecloths, heavy crystal glasses, a 1980s dance music soundtrack, and a single guest suite upstairs for good measure. The unfussy classic cocktail program, which recently included a martini made with a 1970s-vintage gin, completes the perfectly anachronistic ensemble." —William Hanley, Executive Editor

COMPLETE COOKWARE SET, MISEN
$425, misen.co

"I'm overdue for a set of high-quality stainless-steel pots and pans. Thankfully, Visibility designers Joseph Guerra and Sina Sohrab developed these pans for Misen with the same dedication to research that they bring to every project. While the set is made up of investment pieces, Misen's direct-to-consumer approach ensures that it won't break the bank." —Alex Gilbert, Executive Director, Culture+Commerce and The List

BISEL STORAGE SET BY MARIO RUIZ, MAD LAB
Pieces from $146, mad-lab.com

"I'm obsessed with these delicate, modular sets of trays, mirrors, and boxes from Mad Lab. Their minimalist style and dainty scale make keeping your vanity table organized feel like tending your own little bonsai garden." —Mimi Hannon, Copy Editor

HALOSCOPE, GLOSSIER
$22, glossier.com

"When Glossier released the Quartz Haloscope last year, it completely disrupted my otherwise minimal makeup routine. The rose quartz extracts yield a shimmery finish, while the coconut and almond oils at the center of the highlighter moisturize my skin, creating a natural glow. Its compact, glue stick-like packaging makes application effortless, both at home and on the go." —Emily Greene, Marketing & Production Coordinator
